Chimpanzee - Don't eat with your hands

Do you always eat properly with knife and fork? You are not the only one! The chimpanzee also likes to use cutlery to eat. He uses a twig to pick termites (they look a bit like white ants) from their nest. And then he licks his "spoon". Yummy.

Beaver - Sink your teeth into it

Do you like to gnaw? On a carrot or a piece of crusty bread? The beaver likes to do that too, but on a tree trunk. He can gnaw through a tree trunk 25 cm in diameter (about a large dinner plate) in 5 hours.

Hedgehog - Eat with your mouth closed

You are probably not allowed to make smacking noises while eating. But hedgehogs are not so well behaved. They eat small animals, such as snails, worms, ants and woodlice. In the process, they sniff vigorously and chew loudly!

Caterpillar - The very hungry caterpillar

Once a caterpillar hatches from its egg, it does nothing all day but eat from the plant on which the eggs were laid. They easily eat their own weight in leaves. How much would you have to eat to do the same?

Capybara - Never going to the dentist

The capybara eats mostly grasses and aquatic plants. That's tough stuff! And it wears down your teeth. No problem for the capybara, because its teeth grow throughout its life. Handy!

Giant anteater - Stick out your tongue

A giant anteater has a very long tongue, as long as 50 centimeters. To catch enough ants, he flicks his tongue in and out up to 150 times per minute.

Crane - Snack on the go

If you are on the road for a long time, you probably take something to eat with you. But migratory birds, like the crane, eat extra before setting off. They fly hundreds of kilometres a day, without a packed lunch!

Tortoise - Elderly vegetarian

Many tortoises are omnivorous as babies: they eat everything. The proteins in meat help to grow their shell. But when they reach adulthood, they become vegetarian.

Hummingbird - Not too much sugar

For humans, too much sugar is not so good. But the hummingbird can't get enough. It drinks nectar, a kind of sugar water, from flowers. It does this by flapping its wings very quickly and hanging still in front of a flower.
